UWE BREMER

Viruses and their Manners or Coronary Comments

Nobody who knows Uwe Bremer will be surprised that he happily took up the challenge to stage the machinations of the corona virus as works of art. Painted in a masterly manner and refined with gold leaf, the virus is up to its mischief on the wooden background. In addition to this protagonist, Uwe Bremer of course depicts the victims and also the mathematical objects for which he has always had a weakness – as we have already learned from his cosmological still lifes.

The artworks are true gems, and with their splendid colors and baroque forms they are a feast for the eyes. I cannot judge whether they make the viewer lose his fear of the virus, but fortunately the paintings are not contagious and they unite the uncanny and the beautiful in a very close symbiosis. Price per gem: € 6000.-

They can be viewed in the GALERIE KREMERS from July 24th to August 31st, from Monday to Friday between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.
